Time: 3:30-4:30 p.m.
Where: TBD

Lydia Sasu, Founder and Executive Director of the Development Action Association (DAA), is a leading advocate for rural women farmers in Ghana. DAA operates in 46 communities and provides support and training to expand women's access to education, land, credit, infrastructure, and technology.

Lydia works to improve the lives of small-scale, women farmers by elevating their voices at all levels of government. She has advocated for better integration and inclusion of women farmers across many policy platforms, notably USAID's Feed the Future Initiative and Ghana's Comprehensive African Agriculture Development Program (CAADP).

Please join us for an afternoon discussion to learn more about Lydia's experiences and perspective as an NGO leader in Ghana seeking engagement and recognition with her own government and the international donor community. Light refreshments will be provided.
