

An Open Letter to Congress:

In an increasingly complex and integrated global landscape, the United States must be prepared to address challenges with the diplomatic and development tools of the International Affairs Budget.

The International Affairs Budget represents only 1.4% of federal spending, yet reaps significant dividends by ensuring global development and stability; promoting our values through humanitarian action; and expanding markets for American businesses.

Yet, despite its vital role and valuable contributions, the International Affairs Budget shouldered nearly 20% of all discretionary spending cuts in fiscal year 2011. Further cuts will come in lives lost, hard-won gains reversed and missed economic and strategic opportunities for the United States.

Such cuts to the International Affairs Budget would limit our ability to assist the world’s poorest and most vulnerable people, put us on the sidelines in influencing rapidly transforming regions of the world, and signal a dramatic decline of U.S. leadership in promoting a more stable world.

We cannot afford to discontinue critical programs that expand markets for U.S. products and help create American jobs as our country continues to recover from economic crisis. And we cannot betray our nation’s morals by scaling back humanitarian assistance as the Horn of Africa famine claims thousands of lives.

Please oppose disproportionate cuts to the International Affairs Budget.

Sincerely,

129 organizations working to end poverty and respond to emergencies around the world.
